Man Killed By Freight Train-Body of Unidentified Victim found In Yards Near Washington Street Viaduct. An unidentified white man, about 32 years old, was killed Tuesday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock near the Washington Street viaduct when he was crushed beneath the wheels of a southbound Louisville and Nashville freight train. Railroad officials said they believed the victim fell between two cars when he attempted to cross from one to the other. Hoboes on the train were to be questioned relative to the man's identity. He was about five feet, ten inches tall and weighed about 185 pounds. Coroner Clarence Bean said he could find no marks for identification. The victim wore a blue coat, green hat, army trousers and was carrying extra clothing in a bundle. The body was removed to the Bean Funeral Home, where it was to remain pending further identification. The Winchester Sun, Wednesday, October 5, 1932.

unknown woman	A Corpse in a trunk A regular St. Louis Southern Hotel mystery developed at Million Station on the R. N. I.

	& B., this county. From the night passenger train, a large trunk was unloaded and put into the baggage room. It came as baggage and a brass check was the only mark it bore. A slight smell was noticeable about the room next morning which grew stronger and stronger until a veritable stench was produced. In fact it "out-stunk creation," and those who had experienced such things pronounced the offensive smell strikingly like that coming from a corpse. The trunk was opened and a full-grown dead human being – a woman! Coroner Miller was summoned a jury empanelled, and an inquest held. There could be no doubt but a cold-blooded murder had been committed, unless some ingenious friend had devised this cheap plan of conveying the woman over the road and she had died in transit. At this notch in the proceeding, a young medical student in the vicinity, who is attending lectures in Louisville, and came home for the holidays, appeared, produced his duplicate check, and claimed the "stiff". But "Stump," the Coroner, was not satisfied and had Dr. Northcutt and others summoned to testify to the custom and rights of medical students. The testimony was to the effect that such students frequently carried corpses in whole or in part about with them, and that such was necessary for the advancement of medical science. The student testified that he bought the "stiff" from property parties in Louisville. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the above stated facts and court adjourned-Richmond Climax. Unthank, Carter	Killed in pitched battle Harlan – In a pitched battle between Stephen Ledford, Carter Unthank and Thomas Noe, Jr., at Wallins Creek, eight miles west of here, Stephen Ledford was shot and instantly killed, receiving eight revolver wounds in his body. Carter Unthank was shot in the upper part of his left thigh and died three hours later. These three persons had been together all day and seemed to be on excellent terms. Late in the evening they left Wallins Creek postoffice and started up Terry's creek, when they arrived at a point in the road where the affray began. Thomas Noe, Jr., was arrested by Sheriff J.S. Kelly, who left here for that place as soon as he received intelligence of the tragedy. The Winchester Democrat Tuesday, September 20, 1910

Usher, John	TRAGEDY AT MAYFIELD Two Men Killed and Another Wounded-Fifteen Shots in All Were Fired Mayfield, Ky., Dec. 24--Two men killed and another wounded in the result of a tragedy that occurred in the southwest section of the city at a late hour Tuesday night. Deputy sheriff John Usher and Charles Howard, a saloon keeper, were killed and Birch Hillyer, an associate of the latter, received a bullet wound in the hand. Usher and Sheriff Sam Douthit went to Bowlin's home to arrest Hillyer, and resisting, Usher procured a revolver and fired at him. Bowlin ran into the room and fired a bullet through Usher's heart and was in the process of shooting Sheriff Douthit when the latter shot him dead. The tragedy took place in a small room at Bowlin's home, and 15 shots were fired. Hillyer was arrested Tuesday and locked up as an accessory to the murder of Usher. Mayfield Ky., Dec. 27—Ross Bowlin, son of Charles Bowlin, who was killed here by Sheriff Douthit Monday night was put in jail Wednesday night on an old capias. Young Bowlin threatens the life of Douthit. It is difficult to tell where this trouble will end as all the Bowlin's are determined to have revenge. The Winchester Democrat, Tuesday, January 1, 1901.
